DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Vrotacoe et al. (US Patent 5,323,702) in view of Vrotacoe et al. (US Patent 6,105,498).

Regarding claim 1, Vrotacoe et al. ('702) teaches an inner carrier sleeve (40) which can be expanded outwardly using air (Column 4, Lines 61-65 and Column 5, Lines 1-6), a rubber covering on the inner carrier sleeve (74,90), the rubber covering comprising a layer having compressible layer elements (62,64), a layer having elastic layer elements (Column 3, Lines 38-54, Column 5, Lines 46-68 and Column 6, Lines 1-6) and the elastic layer elements being uniform in the circumferential direction (Figure 3 shows uniform layers). However, he does not explicitly show varying degrees in an axial direction so that a sleeve has a tangential elasticity profile symmetric with respect to the axial center of the sleeve.

Vrotacoe et al. ('498) teaches a printing press with various layers that discloses a varying profile cylinder blanket with profile variations in an axial position (Abstract and Column 2, Lines 43-49). It would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to modify the invention taught by Vrotacoe et al. ('702) to include varying profiles as taught by Vrotacoe et al. ('498), since Vrotacoe et al. ('498) teaches it is advantageous to vary the profile in order to prevent the formation of wrinkles on the web.

Regarding claim 2, Vrotacoe et al. ('498) teaches the invention claimed, however he does not explicitly disclose wherein a tangential elasticity profile affects the speed profile of a conveyed paper web in a range of -0.5% to +0.5% across the width of the web. Vrotacoe et al. ('702) teaches a blanket with varying profiles that in turn determines a velocity profile (Column 2, Lines 50-67 and Column 3, Lines 1-10). It would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to modify the invention taught by Vrotacoe et al. ('702) to include varying velocity profiles as taught by Vrotacoe et al. ('498), since Vrotacoe et al. ('498) teaches it is advantageous to overcompensate for variable velocities, so that lateral extremities of the web travel faster than the central web portions in order to eliminate wrinkling of the web.

Regarding the claimed range of -0.5% to +0.5% across the width of the web, it has been held that where the general conditions of a claim are disclosed in the prior art, discovering the optimum or workable ranges involves only routine skill in the art. In re Aller, 105 USPQ 233. It would have been obvious to include the claimed range since such a modification would result in a web having uniform speed in order to prevent the formation of folds of the web.
